Foreword

THE HONOURABLE PAUL T. HELLYER
Minister of National Defence

In contributing a brief forward to the 1964 edition, I should like to take the opportunity of congratulating the Editor and the Members of the Alberta United Services Institute on the enterprise shown in producing this publication.

Because United Services Institutes are associations of officers and ex-officers formed not only for the encouragement and promotion of naval, military and aeronautical arts, science and literature, but also to keep the Canadian public informed on the meaning and necessity of national defence, the associations play an important role in our national life. This is especially true today in view of rapidly changing technology and the major reorganization of our defence forces now under way. It is in the national interest for Canadians to understand the nature of, and the reasons for, our defence policies and to be well informed on how our defence commitments are being met by our armed forces.

Members of the Alberta United Services Institute have made an outstanding contribution in the past towards the fulfillment of these objectives and I am confident they will continue to do so in the future.

MILITARY MATTERS

The Address Of

LT. GEN. GEOFFREY WALSH,
C.B.E., D.S.O., C.D.

to the Members of

The Alberta United Services Institute

April 3, 1964

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen:

First of all, let me say how happy I am to be your guest this evening. It gives me an opportunity to see again many old friends and to meet the members of your Institute I have not met before. As many of you know, I am a firm believer in the value of United Services Institutes, and it is my policy that the Regular Army will give the Institutes every possible support.

Before I left Ottawa just over two weeks ago I made notes on the points I wanted to include in my remarks here this evening. I did this without the benefit of the White Paper on Defence which had not been tabled at that time. I realized of course that if the White Paper was tabled I would have to revise my notes because of the interest it would create in the minds of everyone interested in our defence forces. I propose therefore to speak first tonight for a few minutes about the White Paper before going on to outline for you what I call "The Philosophy of the Reserves," and some of the questions about the Reserves we now have under close study.

Much of the White Paper on Defence deals with the objectives of the government's defence policy including major defence commitments, and it would not, of course, be appropriate for me as a Chief of Staff to comment on matters of government policy. However, I would like to outline for you the effect these policy decisions will have, as I see it, on the Army.

Basically the tasks and aims of the Army remain the same. However, we will have greater flexibility to meet changing conditions and unforeseen commitments. Our Brigade group in Germany will be improved. It will get new equipment and some re-adjustments will be made in its organization to give it greater mobility, flexibility and fire power.

The two brigades in Canada will be re-equipped and re-trained as a mobile force as well as for rotational service with the brigade serving in Germany. These two brigades will therefore be able to take advantage of the increased air transport capabilities of the R.C.A.F. for rapid reinforcement wherever required.

The remaining brigade in Canada will be reorganized as a Special Service Force with emphasis on air portability and air drop capability and will be trained for operations in all types of environment. As you know, the White Paper provides for a much higher percentage of our defence budget being spent for equipment and this, combined with the fact that new equipment is becoming more readily available on the market will result, I believe, in fast progress being made.

With regard to integration, I think the first point to make is that this will have no immediate affect on the field units. It will begin at the highest level, namely—National Defence Headquarters—once the necessary legislation has been passed by Parliament. Integration is aimed at reducing the overhead taken up in the administration of the three services. Moreover, the unified defence planning which will result will emphasize the national entity of our defence force in addition to eliminating the duplicating of services. In short, it will ensure that there is no vacuum in overall defence policy planning.

It is my firm conviction that the reorganization outlined in the White Paper will provide us with a much better manpower equipment ratio, and better utilization of our manpower because we will have more men for our field units and hence will be able to keep them up to full strength. The reorganization will also provide interesting career prospects and a greater dollar effectiveness for the Army as a whole.

I am convinced that the long term advantages will far outweigh the difficulties which one must anticipate in the changeover. Although the concept appears revolutionary its implementation will of necessity be evolutionary. I believe it will provide a tremendous incentive to young officers and young soldiers.

I wish to devote a great deal of my talk to the philosophy of reserves under present and future conditions and to pose some questions which have not yet been answered. Hence I would think it would be appropriate for me to start off by telling you something about the basis of our studies. Traditionally the reserve force or the militia in this country, right up to the time of Korea, was our major defence effort. It was the militia that raised the units for service in South Africa, the First World War, the Second World War and Korea. The old Permanent Force, the Regular Army after the Second World War, was essentially a staff and instructional corps. The advent of the nuclear weapon, especially when Russia achieved it, necessitated a major change in the philosophy of raising and training units for operations as there was no longer time to do this. The concept of the forces in being was evolved. The viability of large reserve forces was in doubt.

You will recall the agonizing period when there was doubt in the militia as to what their role was. With the Berlin crisis it became clear that there was a need for some sort of survival organization if we were to exist as a nation after nuclear attack. The militia was given this as its primary role. I will not dwell on the pros and cons of it except to say that as in every other case where the militia was called upon to do a job they got down and did it.

However, with both the major powers having a nuclear deterrent, it is extremely difficult to visualize deliberate aggression by either of them. It would be suicide for both. Hence the need for what we refer to as more conventional weapons and forces. I believe that it is fantastic to think that either of the great powers would call on the use of nuclear arms, with the great danger of escalation, to counter company or even battalion incursion, and yet such could happen if we were not prepared to react with strong conventional forces. Such incursion, if not checked, could result in a "fait accompli" and a loss of territory. Thus, there is need for conventional forces to deter this kind of an adventure. For available deterrent, conventional forces are needed. This is over-simplifying the philosophy, I know, but I suggest it gives you the basic idea.

Hence the validity of the forces in being is stronger than ever, not only in the nuclear type of war but also to prevent the escalation of minor incidents into nuclear war. We, in Canada, have subscribed to NATO and believe in the United Nations. We have a say in the councils of our allies and in the United Nations, because we have and are prepared to make a contribution. Thus it is necessary for us to have forces available to make an effective contribution to our joint defence and to peace-keeping commitments in the world through the United Nations. In addition to our commitments to NATO and to the United Nations, we must also be prepared to maintain the integrity and sovereignty of our own boundaries. To me, it is unthinkable that we should look to anyone else to do it for us.

Canada is a growing and developing country and we must channel perhaps more of our resources than older nations into development if we are to grow stronger. As a result, we have only limited resources for our defence and we must be selective in what we do in order to get the best dollar effectiveness in our contribution to international commitments. It is necessary for us to examine every facet of our commitments and to surrender those commitments which are not giving us a high cost effectiveness ratio for our defence dollar.

We have a volunteer regular army of which I am extremely proud. It is rated among the best in Europe. It has served the United Nations in many places in the world and has enhanced its reputation. But there is no doubt that we must look to its re-equipping if we are to maintain its effectiveness. The rising costs of maintaining the forces in being is gradually whittling down the funds available for new equipment. It is the Minister's policy to achieve a balance of properly equipped forces in being. Hence it is essential that we try to obtain the best manpower/equipment ratio for our defence dollar expenditure. To achieve this policy it is necessary to look to all our operations, to examine all areas for cutbacks in overhead and, where possible, surrender commitments which do not contribute to our overall defence. With this in mind, Fort Churchill and the northwest highway system have been handed over to civilian agencies. We are closing out other areas of activity and contracting our overhead. We are amalgamating regular units and pooling resources to remove duplication. We have adopted the service battalion concept in the field and are using the same conception in static installations. Army Headquarters is being examined ruthlessly. We are examining areas where we can use data processing machines to cut down time and manpower on inventory control, pay and records, operational research and so on. In this way we hope to achieve considerable savings in manpower and less financial overhead.

It is against this background that our studies on the reserves evolved. Notwithstanding the forces in being concept, our studies indicated, in so far as the army was concerned, the need for reserves to back up the field army in four specific areas. The first of these areas is the survival and warning system throughout the country. We are adopting in this particular field the philosophy we used to follow in manning the old-time forts when Regulars were maintained to provide one shift but the Militia provided the other two shifts in times of emergency. We will need militiamen trained on the special equipment for the national survival warning system from coast to coast. It is manned by the Regular Army in peacetime 24 hours a day. It is essential, however, for continuous full operation to augment these Regular Army personnel. I believe it is logical to get the Militia to do this and they will become quite efficient in doing it as they will be training specifically on the equipment they would use in time of emergency. The numbers involved in this commitment are not very great.

The second area where trained militiamen are required will be internal security — the protection of vulnerable points, internment operations, and other tasks which required trained militiamen for which the regular army will not be available.

The third area in which trained militiamen are required is what I call the "divisional slice." These are the units required to support the field army once it goes abroad. They are not needed immediately on the outbreak of war but once the field units have left the country these special units will be needed as the follow-up or tail of the division to provide such units as motor ambulance convoys, field hospitals, ordnance field parks, base workshops, reinforcement centres, and so on. I see these special units being formed from the Militia so that they will be available to be sent overseas when required, very much the way it was done in 1939.

The fourth important requirement for the Militia is to provide a back-up in time of emergency to support the field force by providing reinforcements of all categories. This training force which would be formed from the Militia would be organized along lines similar to the field force but with only training scales of equipment. It would be built up in stages in accordance with the situation existing at the time. The final policy is yet to be worked out but the definite requirement for this commitment has been established.

Our detailed planning for an emergency has been restricted to 30 days. History has proved time and time again that no matter how one tries to foresee the future and plan accordingly, events never seem to happen as forecast. As a result, we must accept certain limitations in our planning and we must even take calculated risks. It would be ideal if we had unlimited resources and could maintain not only a force in being for our known commitments but if we had forces available for every possible contingency. But we do not have unlimited resources and we must, therefore, accept priorities based on what can best be done with the resources available

Using a ball park figure, we estimate that a Militia force of about 30,000 will satisfy the requirement I have just given you. I might mention at this point that Militia pay does not represent the full cost of keeping Militia units in being. As a sophisticated estimate, I would say that for every dollar that is spent out of the Militia vote, we spend $1.50 to $1.75 out of the Regular Army vote to support the Militia. With a view to increasing the dollar effectiveness of the funds spent on the Militia and to determine the Militia manpower requirement, the Minister has asked a commission, headed by Brigadier Suttie, to recommend a suggested Militia reorganization to meet future needs.

One of the points which this committee has been asked to examine is the surplus of certain types of units. Let us take armour for example. It is organized on the basis of six divisions. We have been fortunate in many respects in having old Second World War equipment available for armoured regiments to train on. Now we have no more spare parts. Even the Centurion tanks now being used by the Regular Army are becoming obsolete and we have recently purchased lifetime spares for them. The maintenance of this expensive and complicated equipment takes more time than the Militia can devote to it. When we consider the number of hours this expensive equipment is used by Militia units throughout the year and the dollars involved in trying to maintain it, it becomes fairly obvious that here is an area in which our dollar effectiveness should be improved. Brigadier Suttie's commission is being asked to examine this problem and others like it. The question which arises in one's mind is whether we should not concentrate the training on expensive and complicated equipment in fewer selected units and not try and spread it across the country.

The suggestion that certain units should be linked raises the question of how we can best obtain a more efficient Militia. We know that if a Militia unit is to remain healthy and effective with a reasonable standard of training, it requires a great deal of effort by the commanding officer and all the other officers. Is there not then an optimum limit to the size of the Militia unit, taking into consideration the amount of equipment it can use, its accommodation, the time that the officers and NCOs can devote to it, not only in supervising their men but in attending courses and becoming qualified? In addition, it must be remembered that hours of hard work are needed to prepare and conduct an interesting training programme within the unit. Effective training must be carried out in the short time available because, if it isn't effective, the Militiamen soon loses interest. This, then, is another area which I hope the commission will cover.

Are we up-to-date in our thinking on when the Militia should train? There has been a trend towards more and more weekend exercises. The five-day work week is with us. In the old six-day work week the evening was the only time available for the Militia. Traditionally we still parade at night. Is this the most effective time? Perhaps it should be more normal to parade on Saturdays and weekends when one gets more effective training time out of the total time available than one does when training is broken up over several evening periods. This again is an area on which I hope the commission will report so that we can establish the best way of doing it.

The training of the Militiaman himself raises questions. I mentioned very briefly the need to know the sophisticated equipment if one is to be effective. We cannot expect the Militiaman, with the time he has available, to become thoroughly proficient or ready to go into the field in the same way as the regular soldier. We could not do it in 1939 and our equipment is far more complicated today. However, one hopes to achieve a basic standard of training upon which we can build very quickly an efficient unit. The basic corps "know-how" must be revived in all ranks and above all our Militiaman should be trained to a standard which will permit us to bring him very quickly up to the standard of a fully-trained soldier in time of emergency. A graph showing the progress of training of a new soldier is very interesting. He starts very slowly and then as he gains in knowledge his progress jumps forward. If we can eliminate that slow starting time with Militia training, then I think we will have accomplished a reasonable target. How best to do this, I am not sure. I recall that in the training of officers and NCOs in the old days we used the provisional schools for those who could not get away from their home towns and they got their final qualification in camp. We used Royal Schools for those who could get away for longer periods. The Militia officer and NCO of that day did have a good basic knowledge of his arm. The Militiaman himself, as I recall, very often went into camp and worked on regular equipment. I grant you the number of technical personnel who went to camp was limited. It seems to me that only 35 men per battery were allowed but nevertheless the standard of gunnery was quite good. Should we examine some similar plan?

One of the bright spots of the Militia training has been the student Militia training that we have been conducting across the country, in which we have achieved a very high standard to the extent that many of these youngsters are now serving as instructors. Perhaps these are ways of tackling this problem that would be more compatible with present day conditions than the traditional ones. I have an open mind on this whole subject and I am looking to Brigadier Suttie's commission to provide a great many of the answers.

This talk, because of time and limitations, has been extremely sketchy. Perhaps I have been too ambitious in trying to cover what we are thinking. We are trying to keep a flexible approach, bearing in mind the need for the forces in being to meet our NATO and United Nations commitments; the fact that nothing in an emergency ever goes exactly the way it is forecast; the need for a back-up and a reasonable number of reserves without under or over-insuring; and, above all, the need to get the best use out of our limited resources. Our final answer might be quite radical when compared to the shape of the forces we have today but it must be an evolutionary process. Although there may be big changes over the years, we must be trained and ready to meet any contingency which might occur tomorrow. I believe if we look ahead and are firm in our resolve to be ready to change with new conditions, we will still have and be able to maintain an effective, vigorous and dynamic Army. It is a challenge to all of us but in particular to the young soldier of today.

A Report On The Reorganization Of 22 MILITIA GROUP

By BRIG. W. A. HOWARD, C.D., Q.C.

In the latter part of January, 1964, a Commission on the Reorganization of the Canadian Army was established under the chairmanship of Brigadier E. R. Suttie. It was given the task of recommending to the Minister of National Defence the best means of fulfilling the militia requirements of Canadian defence policy and the changes which should be made in organization to permit the militia to carry out its revised roles more efficiently and realistically. The roles were stated to be, (a) to support the regular army, (b) to provide a training force in time of emergency, (c) to provide an element of internal security and (d) to assist in fulfilling certain national survival responsibilities.

During the course of its deliberations the Commission visited all Commands and Areas and had discussions with General Officers Commanding Commands, Area Commanders, Militia Group Commanders, some militia commanding officers and others.

The Commission reported in two parts. Part I set forth the criteria and conditions which, in the opinion of the Commission were calculated to produce an efficient militia and dealt with many points including training, equipment, public relations, authority of commanding officers, uniforms, establishments, administration, pay, armouries, stores and orderly rooms. Part II dealt with the reorganization of units and the recommendations with respect to the disposition of units and sub-units.

Resulting from the report and the decision of the Department of National Defence in connection with the various recommendations, several major changes took place. Some units were disbanded. Other units were placed on the inactive list and to facilitate this, and to preserve the name of such units in view of the contribution they have made in the past and against the possibility that changed circumstances might require reactivation, a Supplemental Order of Battle was created to which such units were assigned.

Militia Group Headquarters were disbanded and militia units came under direct command of Area Headquarters. In order to provide advice on militia matters, each General Office Commanding and Area Commander has appointed senior militia officers within his command or area whose primary purpose it will be to advise on all except medical and dental matters.

In certain cities logistic and service units were grouped together under a single headquarters to form a Service Battalion thus bringing the militia into line with the Regular Force concept.

The Reorganization of the Militia should result in a more favourable unit equipment ratio than formerly existed.

Insofar as personnel are concerned, the reorganization of course resulted in a reduction in strength. Where possible, physically fit militia men and women of units reduced in strength, deactivated or amalgamated with other units were absorbed within the establishment or reorganized units in their area. Revised age limits have been introduced both for service in rank and for promotion.

It was also proposed that greater use will be made of regular army personnel and training resources and this is already under way.

In summary, the aim of the reorganization was stated by the Minister to be two-fold, firstly, to make organization adjustments consistent with the militia's assigned roles and realistic appraisal of its capabilities; and secondly, thereby to obtain greater value for each dollar spent.

It is hoped that the end result will be a younger, fitter, more eager, vigourously led militia, capable of taking its place beside the regular army with pride, dedication and a real sense of purpose. It is regrettable that to achieve this end result units have been disbanded or placed on the Supplemental Order of Battle. It is also regrettable that many dedicated militia personnel have been released from the militia. The service rendered by such units and by such personnel is fully appreciated and is not forgotten.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE SERVICES COLLEGES

By F L J. G. A. Gagne

THE ROYAL MILITARY COLLEGE OF CANADA

Early History of the Site

Although Kingston has been a military centre almost continuously since Fort Frontenac was established (on the site of the present barracks of that name) by Count Frontenac in 1673, these early connections were as much with the Navy as with the Army.

French armed vessels sailed out of Fort Frontenac from the end of the seventeenth century and both the French and the British maintained small fleets on Lake Ontario during the Seven Years' War. As early as 1784 or 1785 a British marine establishment was set up on Point Frederick (now the site of the Royal Military College of Canada) where Navy Bay afforded a safe anchorage. At first the dockyard was controlled by the Quartermaster-General's department of the British Army and was used as a place of "deposit" for the transhipment of military stores from river boats to lake schooners as well as a ship-building yard. In 1813, during the war, it was transferred to the Admiralty. The largest ship built here was HMS St. Lawrence, launched in 1814, a 110-gun three-decked ship, larger than HMS Victory. An earthwork and battery was placed on Point Frederick in about 1791 and a blockhouse in 1813.

The Stone Frigate was built in 1819-20 as a storehouse to preserve the fittings of the warships which were laid up in reserve after the Rush-Bagot Agreement was signed in 1817. The dockyard was closed in 1837 but reopened again in 1838 to close finally in 1853.

The present Fort Henry was built during the period 1832-36 to cover the entrance to the new Rideau Canal and also to protect the dockyard and anchorage. The four redoubts or Martello Towers known as Murney, Victoria, Fort Frederick and Cathcart towers were built from 1846 to 1848 at the time of the "Oregon Crisis" to cover the water approaches to Kingston Harbour and Navy Bay.

The College 1876-1942

In 1874 the government of the Hon. Alexander MacKenzie took steps to organize a military college. The Act of Parliament of 1874 establishing the college (37 Vict., Chap. 36) provided that there should be set up an institution "for the purpose of imparting a complete education in all branches of military tactics, fortification, engineering and general scientific knowledge in subjects connected with and necessary to a thorough knowledge of the military profession and for qualifying officers for command and for staff appointments. Such institution to be known as the Military College, and to be located in some one of the garrison towns of Canada." It was natural that the College should be established at Kingston, which had always been an important military station and was still a garrison town; and the disused dockyard on Point Frederick, with the Stone Frigate still standing, offered a convenient site.

The College opened on June 1, 1876, with a class of eighteen Gentlemen Cadets remembered today as the "Old Eighteen." The Commandant, Lieutenant-Colonel E. O. Hewett of the Royal Engineers, had to assist him three other officers of the British Army and one civilian professor. Lt.-Col. Hewett remained as Commandant until 1886 and was later promoted to the rank of Lieutenant-General. Major-General Sir A. C. Macdonell, after outstanding service with the Canadian Army overseas, became the first Commandant to be appointed from the Canadian Armed Forces.

An important development in the early history of the College was the decision of the British Government to offer annually to graduating cadets four commissions in the British regular service. There were one each in the Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers and two in either the Cavalry or the Infantry. Upon the outbreak of the North-West Rebellion of 1885 the Gentlemen Cadets as a body offered themselves for service in the field, but the offer was not accepted. By that time, however, a total of eighty-eight graduates had passed out of RMC and nearly half of this number served with the force engaged in suppressing the rebellion and a large number were serving abroad with the Imperial Army.

During the First World War the Royal Military College continued to function except that courses were shortened and that the staff was reduced. This war, the first in modern times in which Canada was required to exert effort on a national scale, strikingly demonstrated the value of the College. In that war 982 ex-cadets are known to have served and 147 gave their lives. Many rose to positions of high command and these ex-cadets won a total of 699 honours and awards. A Memorial Arch commemorating these ex-cadets who died in the service of the Crown in this and earlier wars was presented to the College by the Royal Military College Club of Canada in 1924.

College records show that a total of 1359 ex-cadets served in the Armed Forces in the Second World War, while 72 more engaged in special war work outside the forces. Of those who served, 114 lost their lives and 711 honours and awards were won.

The Canadian Services Colleges — from 1948

In the post-war reorganization of the Canadian Armed Forces, the Royal Military College was designated a Canadian Services College and reopened as such in the autumn of 1948. It now shares with Royal Roads, Victoria, B.C., and the Collège Militaire Royal de Saint-Jean, Quebec, the responsibility of tri-service cadet training and graduates now enter the Regular and Reserve Forces of the Royal Canadian Navy, the Canadian Army, and the Royal Canadian Air Force.

This is actually much less an innovation than might at first appear. Although RMC has always been considered as primarily concerned with the production of Army officers, it had from its earliest days close connections with the Navy and it has had strong Air Force affiliations in more recent times. Its naval traditions, have, moreover, been reinforced by incidents of more modern history. When the Halifax explosion of December 1917 rendered the Royal Canadian Navy College homeless, it was temporarily transferred to Kingston and its courses were conducted at the RMC from February to June, 1918. During the Second World War, the College's naval ties were further strengthened when three naval staff courses were held at RMC in 1940. Students attending these courses were quartered in "HMCS Stone Frigate" which flew the White Ensign while they were in residence.

It should be noted also that many ex-cadets of the College have at various times, and increasingly in more recent history, joined the Naval or Air Forces of the Crown. During the years between the two World Wars, after the closing in 1922 of the Royal Canadian Naval College just referred to, the RMC was the only military educational institution in Canada. As such it served as a source of officers not only for the Canadian forces but also for the British Army, the Royal Air Force, the Indian Army, the RCMP and various other Imperial Constabularies and Police Forces.

It is significant that ex-cadets distinguished themselves in all three services in both World Wars. Exact statistics for the First World War are not available but the figures for the Second are of interest. Of all who served 71 were in Canadian Naval Forces, 962 were in the Canadian Army and 164 were in the RCAF. Five served in Naval forces of the United Kingdom; one hundred and eight were in the British Army; and there were twenty-two in the Royal Air Force. The RCMP and miscellaneous forces accounted for the remaining twenty-seven.

In the light of the foregoing facts, it can be said that the RMC was a tri-service college in all but name even prior to 1939. While its curriculum was basically "military" in the narrower sense of that term, it served all three Canadian armed forces, all three of the British services, and many other Empire forces. It was thus not an entirely new career that the College began in 1948. The RMC merely entered a new phase of the distinguished service which it has rendered to Canada and the Commonwealth for more than three-quarters of a century.

An event of historical importance in the life of the College occurred on June 2, 1961, when RMC received a new stand of Colours, comprised of the Queen's Colour and the College Colour, at the hand of His Excellency, Major-General Georges P. Vanier, DSO, MC, CD, the Governor-General of Canada. The College received its first stand of Colours at the hand of His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales, October 25, 1919. These Colours remained in service until June 20, 1942, when RMC was closed to cadets for the remainder of the Second World War. On that date the Colours were laid up in St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, where they still remain.

Academics

The new curriculum provides a four-year course at RMC for senior matriculants. The first two years of the course may be taken by similarly qualified officer cadets at either Royal Roads or CMR. However, all must take their final two years at RMC and hence, all who complete the course eventually graduate from that College. In addition, junior matriculants may enter a preparatory year at CMR.

For most of RMC's history, a diploma was granted at the end of a four-year course. In 1959, however, the 25th Ontario Legislature empowered the College to confer degrees and honorary degrees in Arts, Science and Engineering. Honours and pass Arts degrees are offered in English, French, History, Politics, Economics, Commerce and Geography. Both honours and pass degrees are offered in Science and Engineering. The options are chemical, civil, electrical, mechanical and engineering physics. Those cadets who choose arts options will specialize only in their third and fourth years and thereby acquire a solid background in mathematics and science. On the other hand, a cadet graduating with an engineering degree has taken about fifteen full courses in the humanities in his four years.

Military Training

The purpose of the Canadian Services Colleges is to teach the skills and to develop the qualities of character, loyalty and leadership essential to well educated and efficient young officers. To that end emphasis is placed on academic excellence, leadership, military history and public speaking. Experienced regular officers and, in some instances, civilian professors, are responsible for the teaching of these courses.

All cadets are grouped into a Cadet Wing which is organized within itself along strictly military lines into squadrons, flights and sections. Cadet officers, appointed from the Graduating Class, are directly responsible to see that all regulations are adhered to and that the required standards of discipline, conduct and deportment are maintained. Regular officers of all three Services are directly responsible to the Commandant for the discipline, assessment, counselling and welfare of all cadets in general and work in close association with the Cadet officers in particular.

All Cadets also receive practical training with their own Service for approximately three months every summer. They then perfect their professional education and become better acquainted with the responsibilities awaiting them as officers in the Canadian Armed Forces.

Athletic Training

The physical education and athletic programme at the Canservcols is of major importance in the development of military officers. Many of the requirements for participation in the activities are similar to those required of the soldier in the field, the sailor at sea, or the flyer in the air. Contact sports require courage and aggressiveness, while others require fine skills and co-ordination. Team sports require self-sacrifice and esprit-de-corps while individual sports require self-confidence and the ability to rely completely on one's self. All sports require self-discipline, the capacity for making quick decisions and the ability to remain calm and poised under pressure. It is recognized that a high level of physical fitness is desirable in all Armed Forces Officers and only through the Physical Education Programme can this be attained and maintained.

The aim of this programme is achieved through a balanced and progressive schedule of activities which can be categorized as follows:

- (a) Physical education.
- (b) Intramural sports.
- (c) Intercollegiate athletics.

Fundamentals are first thought to assist cadets in their over-all physical development and to provide them with an organized exercise programme in order to enable them to accept physical stresses and strains of military life. Cadets also receive instruction on fundamentals, basic game strategy and team play in selected sports and must reach a recognized standard in swimming and life-saving.

The Intramural Programme is also compulsory and comprises six hours a week catering to twenty-four different sports. It is mandatory that each cadet play his choice of body contact game and an individual game while also taking instruction in carry-over sports such as golf, tennis, swimming, etc. This programme also exercises cadets as officials, coaches, managers and team captains whenever possible, and gives cadets a golden opportunity to put into practice theories learned in the classroom.

The Extramural Programme provides an outlet for those cadets with above average skills to set their prowess against those of other Colleges, while also providing a degree of progression and a sense of accomplishment to all participants.

The purpose of the Canadian Services College is to provide a source of highly qualified officers for the Armed Forces of Canada. The academic courses, military training and athletic programme of these Colleges are so designed as to provide a liberal, scientific and military education. A very enviable record has been established and graduates have been of great service to Canada and to the Commonwealth.

THE REPORTS OF THE OFFICERS OF
1964

The Report Of The President

The year 1964 has been, I believe, successful. It presented us with a challenge, a challenge we must be determined to meet. The changes in the armed forces have been most severe. The Air Force has been withdrawn, the Reserve Army has been reduced, and is still in the process of change, only the Navy seems to have remained firm. These changes could, if we allow them, have a very detrimental effect on the future of this Institute. It is the duty of all of us to see that this does not happen.

Now, more than ever before, this Institute must provide a firm base and rallying point for all members, and particularly those whose units and formations have become temporarily dormant. It is here we can maintain friendships and affiliations, and keep ourselves as up to date as possible with what is going on in the different branches of the service. We must strive to make it as much an information centre as a social centre.

The future of our building is also in jeopardy, although there is nothing definite at the moment. It is reasonably certain that the happy relationship between the Garrison Officers Mess and the Institute will always prevail. We must face the fact, however, that with their reduced strength they could be moved to smaller quarters which could not accommodate an organization of our size. Your Directors have set up a continuing committee to investigate alternate accommodation if this should happen, although it is too early yet for any report. Also considerably more of your surplus has been allocated to the building fund, as is shown in the auditor's report. An arrangement has also been made with the Garrison Officers' Mess whereby new furniture and equipment is now purchased by the Institute and remains our property, this will prevent everything being tied up in the non-public funds account in the event of any sudden change.

I would briefly summarize the various events of the past year. The AUSI Curling Bonspiel held at the Currie rink in March was well attended and enjoyed by all. My thanks to Lt. Henry Owens and Mr. Jock Higgins for a smoothly run performance.

The Annual Mess Dinner in April had the best attendance in some time. The speaker, Lt. Gen. Geoffrey Walsh, CBE, DSO, CD, was most interesting and informative, both in his official address, and off the record after the dinner. I wish to extend my thanks to Lt. Col. Williams and his committee, also to Brig. Howard, who helped in providing our speaker, and whom I suspect had a hand in the attendance.

The Annual Barbecue was the usual success and all credit must go to S L. H. L. MacKenzie and Mr. Higgins.

I am pleased to say most comments I received about the Military Ball were more than favourable. It was an experiment and very different from those in the past. The attendance to say the least, was tremendous, and I thank you all for your support. I have, however, heard the occasional supporter for the pomp and circumstance of the older location and I am sure the incoming directorate would appreciate any comments for next year. My sincere thanks to G/C. Sargenia and his committee for their work.

The series of pictures "Canada At War" was very well attended and enjoyed by all. It was very evident by the comments that service rivalry is still strong, though friendly. These films were arranged for by Lt. Henry Owens, of our entertainment committee and Bob Peltier of the Dow Breweries, one of our privileged members. My thanks to both of them.

The Annual Golf Tournament held at the Bowness Golf Club was also very well attended and enjoyed. I am sorry to say there was one complaint, the true object of the ancient and honourable game was missing. Here again I have to thank Lt. Owens and Mr. Higgins.

I was privileged on your behalf to present the annual award and cheque for the cadet corps showing the most improvement in 1964 to:

R.C.S.C.C. Undaunted - Calgary
19 Medium Arty Regt. Cadet Corps No. 1955 - Calgary
No. 266 Sqn R.C.A.C. - Kimberley, B.C.

All three units were exceedingly smart on parade and warranted their awards. I feel I must make special mention of the air force cadets at Kimberley, B.C. This unit, the boys, the instructors, and parents have, over the past several years built their own accommodation by excavating and finishing the space under the high school auditorium.

They have done an excellent job.

I would like to urge the continuation of support for these cadet and young soldier organizations, for this is the source of future members.

I regret that there is no satisfactory applicant for the Wing Commander Freeman scholarship in 1964. The scholarship committee has submitted a separate report with which I concur. The scholarship for 1963 was presented in 1964 to Ross Duncan Strachan, the son of Major Bruce Strachan.

The Joint Entertainment Committee staged the Annual Klondike Night, the Hallowe'en Frolic and a number of successful Bingo Nights. I would like to extend my thanks to the members for their support on these occasions.

I must also extend my thanks to Lt. Col. E. M. Findlay, the Garrison Officers' Mess Committee, and the mess manager, Capt. L. A. Sleen, for their support and cooperation during the year.

I fully accept responsibility for the lateness of the journal, I have no valid excuse, but I would like to say thank you to Lt. Col. Williams for all his work, and the Garrison Officers' Mess for sharing in the cost of publication.

I feel a word of censure is in order for the poor support we obtained on the night of the Blood Clinic. Lt. Owens put in a lot of work and if it had not been for the militia members on parade that night, the effort would have been a total loss.

I regret to inform you that Mr. Jock Higgins gave up the full time appointment of secretary treasurer early in the fall. He has been doing an excellent job on a part time basis for the balance of this year, and is now with us on a month to month basis until other arrangements are made. I am completely satisfied with the help he has given me and I extend to him my thanks.

Gentlemen - I thank you for the honour you have conferred on me and I wish my successor, and the Institute, continued success.

—Lt. Col. A. F. McIntosh, E.D.

THE REPORT OF THE HONORARY SECRETARY-TREASURER

Mr. President, Members of the Board, Members:

At the March '64 directors' meeting, Capt. Sleen, who had been the Honorary Secretary Treasurer since July of 1959, advised he found himself unable to continue as the Honorary Secretary Treasurer of the Institute. The President thanked Capt. Sleen very much for his services on behalf of the Institute over the past five years, it was then that your writer found himself again a member of the Board. Like my predecessor I have found the duties are all such that you tie in with all the committees, and as you will find the reports of all committees on other pages it is not necessary I make any lengthy report. I do wish to report on our numbers.

During the year the membership rolls showed a decrease of six over the previous year.

The breakdown of membership with comparison to the previous year is:

|                             | 1964 | 1963 |
|-----------------------------|------|------|
| Regular members -----       | 800  | 831  |
| Regular Force members ----- | 142  | 172  |
| Privileged members -----    | 87   | 32   |
|                             | 1029 | 1035 |

This, Gentlemen, I submit as my report for the year 1964.

—F/L. J. R. Wright, CD

THE REPORT OF THE HONORARY CHAPLAIN

I was honoured by being appointed Chaplain of the Institute in January 1958. Apart from saying "Grace" at various functions and conducting the odd funeral for one of our departed members, I cannot claim to have been overworked, and sometimes feel related to the humble "period" of a sentence "having position, but no magnitude."

I was glad, therefore, to assume added duties of my incumbency, by being approached by the editor of the Journal to write a short message for the 1964 edition.

Having served at all levels of army life for some 20 years, in school Cadets, as an NCO, as a Rifleman and NCO in the British Forces, and as a Chaplain in the Canadian Forces for 13 years and as a Hospital Chaplain for nearly 16 years - it is understandable that I shall always have a very warm spot in my heart for all members and ex-members of the Tri-services.

Because of this long and happy association, in war and in peace, I would like all members of the Institute to know, that as Honorary Chaplain, I am always prepared to serve, each and everyone, on any occasion, and in any way I can, within the confines of my office as a Chaplain.

Thank you for receiving me so kindly during the past years, and may 1965 prove one of our happiest and most prosperous years in the history of the Institute.

—E. N. P. Orme (Major)
Chaplain (P).

THE REPORT OF THE HONORARY LIBRARIAN

Mr. President and Gentlemen:

The Institute's Library continued to provide interest and instruction for a regular and persistent minority of the members during 1964.

In all, twenty single volumes were acquired by purchase plus a complete set of twenty-four volumes of the 1961 Encyclopedia Britannica.

The latter addition cost the Institute $70.00 (a bargain price) and in view of this unusual opportunity the Directorate authorized the expenditure of $50.00 in excess of the $200.00 which was approved by the Members at the Annual General Meeting in January, 1964.

I wish to recommend that $200.00 be voted for the maintenance of the Library during 1965.

Respectfully submitted,
Surg. Lt. Cdr. D. Shute, R.N.

THE REPORT OF THE AUDITOR

In accordance with your request, I have examined the balance sheet of the Alberta United Services Institute as at 31st December 1964, and the statement of revenue and expense for the year ended on that date and have obtained all the information and explanations I have required. My examination included such tests of the accounting records and other supporting evidence as I considered necessary.

In my opinion, the balance sheet and related statement of revenue and expense presents a true and correct view of the affairs of the Institute as at 31st December 1964, and the results of operations for the year ended on that date, according to the best of my information and the explanations given to me and as shown by the books of the Institute.

—Lt. D. J. Morrison, C.A. R.C.N. (R)

THE REPORTS OF THE COMMITTEES OF
1964

REPORT OF THE FINANCE AND HOUSE COMMITTEE

Mr. President and Members:

Elsewhere in this Journal are the reports of the Auditor and a Statement of Revenue and Expense for the year ending December 31, 1964, together with comparative accounts for the year 1963. Under the circumstances, I refer only to certain items which may require some further clarification.

The excess of revenue over expenses was encouraging. Membership and government grants showed an increase over 1963 but a portion of the government grant amount was actually 1963 monies not received in time to be included in that year's statement.

Under the heading Expense we were pleased to note that the new arrangements (pricing, location, etc.) for the Military Ball resulted in a much more successful financial outcome compared to many previous years.

The annual mess dinner showed a financial improvement over previous years but it is recommended that every attention be given to this event in order that it become self sustaining.

During the year a total of $7,500 was transferred from surplus to the Building Fund Account. It is recommended that even more consideration be given to this area in future.

THE REPORT OF THE MEMBERSHIP COMMITTEE

Mr. President and Members:

In 1963 your Institute had a total membership of 863 and during the past year we enjoyed a net increase of 25, bringing our total to 888 members.

During 1964 we admitted a net increase of 50 privileged members, bringing the total of this category to 87.

Your Journal, as in past years, will provide you with a membership listing.

Lt. Cdr. RCN (R) Retired

THE REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON SPEAKERS

In 1964 your executive obtained the services of two speakers to address the members of The Alberta United Services Institute, Lt. Gen. Geoffery Walsh, C.B.E., D.S.O., C.D., and G C W. H. Carr, D.F.C., C.D. The address of Gen. Walsh, published in full elsewhere in this Journal. The Paper of G/C Carr on the R.C.A.F. in the Congo contribute much to an understanding of the complexities of the current military role.

The day has obviously passed where the commander bases his decision solely on military factors. Political, economic and social factors exert at least as much if not a greater influence. Both of these papers, the one written in the context of high national policy, the other in the realm of international relationships give a clear indication of this. They form a part of our history and are well worth recording.

Apropos this matter of printing papers on military subject, your committee notices that this is the first time in some years that such has been done. To our mind it marks a return to the days when the Alberta United Services Institute Journal was a true military journal, not a compendium of local statistics as in the past few years.

This change is a salutary one and the Directors are to be complimented on it. It may cost more but the product is definitely better.

THE REPORT ON THE WING COMMANDER DON FREEMAN SCHOLARSHIP

Since the scholarship program was instituted, awards of $300.00 each have been made to the following persons:

|                          |                       |
|--------------------------|-----------------------|
| 1957—Donald R. MacKinnon | 1961—John J. Marshall |
| 1958—Graham Edward White | 1962—Donald McLean    |
| 1959—Patrick Leo Shannon | 1963—Bruce Strachan   |
| 1960—Not awarded         | 1964—Not awarded      |

While the qualities of the successful candidates have met the high expectations of the members it has become apparent in recent years that the terms were too restrictive resulting in a decline in the numbers of applicants. Early in 1964 therefor, the President established a special committee under the chairmanship of S L H. L. MacKenzie to investigate the whole matter. His report was brought in at the annual general meeting in January of 1965 and his recommendations approved. Briefly the changes permit the son or daughter of a member of the Institute to apply regardless of whether or not such child has served in a cadet corps or with the Young Soldiers Training Plan, provided of course the applicant possesses the other necessary qualifications.

These are:

1. An applicant must be completing Grade XI or Grade XII.
2. An applicant may be a female or male member in good standing in the Cadet Corps of the Navy, Army or Air Force.
3. An applicant may be a member in good standing of the Young Soldiers Training Plan.
4. An applicant may be a son or daughter of a Regular, Honorary or Life Member in good standing in the Alberta United Services Institute.
5. An applicant must reside south of a line between Townships 39 and 40 in the Province of Alberta.
6. An applicant must be recommended by his or her High School Principal as being a good student.
7. An applicant, if a member of a Cadet Corps or Young Soldier Training Plan, must be recommended by the Chief Instructor of his or her unit.
8. An applicant should be active in school, cadet or community activities.
9. An applicant may not be a person who has been accepted by a Service College or other educational institution as the recipient of a service scholarship of a type available to those who agree to engage in service in the Armed Forces of Canada.

THE REPORT OF THE CADET COMMITTEE

Early in 1964 the President directed the Cadet Committee to investigate and report upon “all prizes, awards, bursaries and scholarships” (awards) presented by the Institute and in particular to answer the following questions:

- 1) For what purpose are the awards made?
- 2) Are the awards presently made by the Institute authorized by its constitution and bylaws?
- 3) Are the awards made by the Institute commensurate with the financial position of the Institute?

- 4) Do the awards achieve the purpose for which they are designed.
- 5) What changes, if any, should be made in the awards?

With this in mind the committee reviewed the awards in 1962 and 1963 which were as follows:

1962:

|                                  |          |
|----------------------------------|----------|
| Don Freeman Memorial Scholarship | $300.00 |
| (Donald R. McLean)               |          |
| RCSCC Chinook                    | 75.00    |
| QORC Cadet Corps No. 2554        | 125.00   |
| LdSH (RC) Cadet Corps            | 50.00    |
| 33 Fd. Sqn. RCE Cadet Corps      | 25.00    |
| RCAC Sqn.                        | 125.00   |
| Young Soldiers' Training Plan    | 313.33   |
| RCAF Young Airman Plan           | 86.67    |
| TOTAL:                           | 800.00   |

1963:

|                                  |          |
|----------------------------------|----------|
| Don Freeman Memorial Scholarship | $300.00 |
| (Ross Strachan)                  |          |
| Navy Cadets                      | 75.00    |
| 19 Med, Regt. RCA Cadet Corps    | 125.00   |
| Red Deer Army Cadet Corps        | 50.00    |
| 33 Fd. Sqn RCE Cadet Corps       | 25.00    |
| RCAC Sqn No. 266 - Kimberley     | 125.00   |
| Young Solders' Training Plan     | 153.00   |
| RCAF Young Airmen Plan           | 37.00    |
| TOTAL:                           | 890.00   |

By resolution of the Board passed on the 26th day of February 1964 it was moved that

“the AUSI cease making cash contributions to the various corps and to the young Solder’s Training Plans and in lieu thereof contribute two scholarships of $300 each to two persons who shall be selected on the same basis as is the grantee of the Don Freeman Memorial Scholarship and subject to the same terms and that authority be sought to give such scholarships in the name of Her Majesty the Queen.”

This motion was tabled and when brought up at a meeting of the Directors on the 24th September 1964 was further tabled. Consequently, no awards were made in 1964.

The reason for tabling the motion was that the terms of the Don Freeman Memorial Scholarship are being reviewed, it being felt that they may be too onerous. The dearth of applicants certainly supports this view. It is hoped that the matter will be resolved in 1965.

THE REPORT OF THE ANNUAL MESS DINNER

On the 3rd of April, a date which commemorates the Battle of Vimy Ridge, over 200 members of the Alberta United Services Institute and their guests gathered at the Palliser Hotel in Calgary for their annual mess dinner, to renew old friendships and to honour their comrades who had died in our country's service. Amongst the distinguished soldiers there present were the Chief of the General Staff Lt. Gen. Geoffery Walsh, C.B.E., D.S.O., C.D. and two of his staff - Lt. Col. L. A. Bourgeois C.D., and Lt. Col. Sarantos C.D. Also present were Major General J. M. Rockingham C.B., C.B.E., D.S.O., C.D., Gen. Officer Commanding Western Command, Brig. B. F. MacDonald, D.S.O., C.D., Col. F. LeP. T. Clifford, C.D., Brig. W. A. Howard, C.D., the commanders of the regular force and reserve units and many others. The civilians counted amongst their numbers His Excellency Bishop Wilhelm the Roman Catholic Auxiliary Bishop of Calgary, the consular representative of the United States of America, a number of the past presidents of the Institute and many a distinguished member.

During the pre dinner reception, those in attendance were entertained by the Pipes and Drums of the 19th Medium Regiment of Artillery while during dinner the band of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps played for the pleasure of the assembled company. The Institute is indebted to the musicians and to their commanding officers, Lt. Col. Burden, C.D., and Lt. Col. Findlay, C.D., by whose permission they appeared.

Upon the asking of the blessing by His Excellency the guests took their places in the tastefully decorated dining room where the fresh cut daffodils, the excellent menu and the martial music all contributed to a most enjoyable dinner.

Following dinner G C G. E. Sargenia, C.D., the Vice-President of the Institute called for two toasts - to Her Majesty and to the Armed Forces of Canada. These were proposed by a young officer of the Royal Canadian Engineers and responded to by all present. Immediately following the toasts a trumpeter from Lord Strathcona's Horse (RC) sounded the Last Post when a silence was observed which was broken by Reveille.

Thus were our comrades who had fallen in our Country's wars honoured by their brethren.

At this time Brig. MacDonald, in a witty speech, introduced the speaker of the evening, the Chief of the General Staff whose address on military matters was of very great interest to the large audience.

At the conclusion of the dinner and before the adjournment, the President Lt. Col. A. F. McIntosh, E.D. on behalf of the members presented Lt. General Walsh with a diamond willow walking stick as a gesture of appreciation and to commemorate the occasion.

The Vimy Dinner - as it is called by the old timers or the Annual Mess Dinner as it is now properly called is more than a social function. It is a tribute in the best traditions of the service paid to our dead by the living members. This year 211 persons paid that tribute. Where were the others?

—Lt. Col. C. D. Williams, C.D., Q.C.

THE REPORT OF THE MILITARY BALL COMMITTEE

Calgary's newest hotel provided a perfect setting for Calgary's oldest major social event. In 1964 the largest number ever to attend the Annual Military Ball was present at the Calgary Inn where the accommodation, service and hospitality exceeded the highest expectations.

The Units of the 22nd Military Group were most helpful in providing the service of sentry's, guards of honor, escort parties, bands and etc., and without their help this premier event would lose much of its color and indeed much of its right to be called "The Military Ball". The members of the Institute are most appreciative.

The receiving line headed by the President and Mrs. McIntosh made the distinguished, formally attired guests welcome to the splendid affair and the reception which followed was the more enjoyable on that account.

Following the modern trend, tables were set up in the ball room in cabaret fashion and the members had the privilege of reserving tables for themselves and their guests. Another new feature was the serving of dinner continuously throughout the evening so that no sudden crush resulted and the guests suffered a minimum of inconvenience.

The stations where liquid refreshments were dispensed were well staffed and quite adequate for their important role.

The greater attendance at this event and the close supervision of expenditures resulted for the first time in many years in a nominal financial loss and the executive is to be commended.

THE REPORT OF THE JOINT ENTERTAINMENT COMMITTEE

Your Joint Entertainment Committee was again quite active, and we feel accomplished a good deal in bringing the two tenants of our mess together for social activities. The co-operation and assistance which we received from the members and the staff of the AUSI and the GOM made our task both simple and enjoyable.

Probably our most successful venture of the year 1964 was once again the Bingo Nights. With the able assistance of Maj. J. Collett as master of ceremonies, we kicked off the year on the 28th February 1964 and followed up with a Bingo Night every quarter, 11th April 1964, 18th September 1964 and 11th December 1964. Our attendance was excellent and those who came for fun, we don't believe anyone was disappointed.

On 1st May 1964 we staged our annual Klondike Night which was very well attended. As usual the highlight of the evening was the display of costumes. The effort that some of our members put into making up their costumes ensures the success of this evening annually.

This year for the first time we staged the Halloween Howl on 31st October 1964. Our thoughts were to offset Klondike Night so that we had a costume ball Spring and Fall. Our numbers were a little disappointing but we hope this may be corrected next year. Those members who did turn out appeared to have a most enjoyable evening. Once again the costumes were fabulous and set the stage for the whole evening. We must apologize to the ladies who lost their hair dos while dunking for apples but we certainly wish to thank them for being such good sports.

Pre-football warm-ups were well attended and that bus is the only way to get to a football game. The cuisine offered by the smorgasborg, the refreshments and the lively chatter guaranteed the success of these ventures. We were concerned originally because wives kept losing husbands and vice versa. However, after some investigation we found this was by design not accident, so therefore ceased our concern.

THE SPORTING SET

ALBERTA PROVINCIAL RIFLE ASSOCIATION

For many years The Alberta United Services Institute has contributed a prize to the annual championship matches of the Alberta Provincial Rifle Association.

With changing times the weapons and their use have changed and this competition to which the Institute contributes a major prize is now fired with the 7.62 FN C.1 Rifle.

In 1964 this competition was won by Cpl. Lyons, C.D. of the 2 PPCLI.

The Institute's contribution of $50 provides the Gold, Silver, and Bronze Medals and the Cash awards.

GOLF

Early one Saturday morning in late September over eighty members of the Alberta United Services Institute turned out to take part in the annual Ritual, — that Ancient and Honourable game which claims St. Andrew's as its home.

While our members played through eighteen holes of golf, they also played at some other holes, prior to, during and after the game. These extra holes did a lot to help the players, but not their game. Some members, however, played serious golf and amongst that number was one Lieutenant Don Francis. He played so seriously and so well that he won the Ledingham Trophy, emblematic of golf supremacy amongst the members of the AUSI.

The chairman of the golf committee somehow or other schemed up so many different titles to which one could aspire that some 99.9% of the players were the recipients of prizes. One player was heard to remark that his wife had said she would leave him if he didn't chuck this golf - his opponent sympathized to which the first player answered, Yes-es. I'll sure miss her. Anyway it was a grand day.

This year's tourney was probably the most successful to date. The fresh air and sunshine was healthful and good, the 19th hole and the various watering holes even more so.

—Lt. H. W. Owens

CRICKET

Always a bridesmaid, never a bride typifies the Cricket Club's performance in 1964. For the third year in succession we have finished second to the Astras in the local cricket league.

Our Second World War veterans are now very much in that class, but two original founders of the club, Jack Hopwood and Derek Lester, still play as does Robin Douglas who joined the club in 1956. We lost Derek Warren to London, Ontario but gained three or four promising players. As has been forced upon us for many years we were obliged to procure talent outside the mess - it not having produced any stars (at least for cricket).

We were well led by Ian Sanderson and all enjoyed their cricket immensely. Sherrington, Cooper and Douglas represented the province in the Inter-Provincial Tournament in Quebec in August.

Once again we owe much to the AUSI for their patronage and support.

—Lt. Cmdr. C. D. Lester (RCNVR)

CURLING

Saturday, March 21st was the big day in the lives of the AUSI curlers. Your writer feels he is using the word "curlers" rather loosely, however twas on that day the ninety six members of the AUSI journeyed to the Currie Curling Rink to be contestants in the battle of the Stane and Besom. That great organizer, Hank Owens, did organize the event in a most thorough manner, although each rink had to wait two hours between each of their games, no one suffered, the Kingsmen ensured that long interval seemed to be of short duration. After the smoke of the battle had cleared, the computer, Bill Mercer, came up with this story, the winners were the Bob Perry rink. On this rink was R. Perry, B. Saik, M. Komlodi, and E. Pipella. All in all it was a good day, and everyone agreed this AUSI annual curling bonspiel just has to be kept in the top priority list of our functions.

SNOOKER & BILLIARDS

The winter season's activities for the backroom boys was officially opened with the annual Calcutta Banquet on November 13 with approximately sixty in attendance.

Fifty-five and thirty-five players and would-be-players entered the Snooker and Billiards Tournaments respectively. The Auction, again capably run by Lieut. H. W. Owens, went off briskly with near record bids being made for some of the favourites and above-average prices being paid across the board for the remainder. By the size of their bids, certain members left the impression that the Canadian dollar was going to be devalued 90% the day following the banquet.

Some months after the auction and after the smoke and glasses were cleared from the billiard room it was found the winner was Jack Anshetz over the runner-up Scotty Hill in the billiard tournament and Hank Owens triumphed over Cy Irwin in the snooker tournament.

THE REPORT OF THE BAR BQ COMMITTEE

It took Sqdn. Ldr. Herb MacKenzie 11 hours to prepare the 600 pounds of roast beef served at the Alberta United Services Institute barbecue for 400 members and invited guests attending the annual event at Sarcee Camp on August 8th.

Gallon of beans and 60 dozen cobs of golden corn and an unrecorded quantity of liquid refreshment was served to the guests when the dinner bell rang at 6 p.m.

Music for the after-dinner dancing session was provided by the Archie Lyons band and with the lilting strains of western music spreading over the valley, the party began in earnest.

For the informal affair with a western flavor, most of the women donned calico skirts, squaw dresses or blue jeans with plaid shirts and their partners sported 10-gallon hats.

This affair which is entirely self supporting is as much a tradition in the Institute as is the Military Ball and the Annual Mess Dinner. It will it is hoped be an annual affair so that future members may continue to enjoy it.
